INTRODUCTION

What is the future? Is it a predetermined logistic, a place set in time and space where everyone arrives at some predestined point? Is it a specific perspective that people discover along the way while focused in a present moment? Is it a coordinate that each is headed towards and will someday pass through? Or is the future something that is malleable, permeable and changeable depending upon the current space, time and dimension where you find yourself. These are questions that everyone might do well to explore, and this is particularly true at a moment when the actual time and dimension in which you have existed for millennia is collapsing, or more aptly put, evolving, as the current time and dimension reaches a new vibrational definition. It is there in that new vibrational frequency that the coming world, a new dimension and, consequently, a new timeline await you.

In this book, we would like to explore with you the notion of where you are headed within the context of newly emerging timelines. More specifically, we wish to explore with you the events of two probable future time-space scenarios, projected outward and based on the movement and frequency of the current dimensional timeline's collapse and regeneration.

The period you are in could be said to be a true fork in the road for both you and your reality. One direction, or timeline if you please, will provide for a continued Third Dimensional reality, one that is actually the evolution of the Second Universal Dimension as it merges with and becomes the current Third Dimensional space-time you now know. The other timeline and future will follow the evolution of the current Third Dimensional timeline as much of what it contains raises its oscillation and vibrational quality to become the continuation of a Fifth Dimensional reality.

The direction, or timeline, that each of you will follow shall depend in large part on your own Soul matrix association, your present level of growth and consciousness and your ability to hold higher dimensional frequencies - light energy - when in physical incarnation. As we have said in the past, Ascension on the part of entities and their associated Soul matrix is a matter of individual effort and choice, and is not usually accidental.

True time, not the unit of measurement but the space wave it represents, is a spiral wave of photon energy that could be compared to a groove or wormhole, which forms the dimensional space that surrounds you and, for the most part, the Solar System (and sometimes even the Galaxy) of which you are a part. Within it you incarnate and life is generated. You know this as physical reality. As one universal dimension or wave collapses, it evolves by merging with and becoming the continuation of the next universal dimension. In the case of a universal dimension, the process is one where an evolving space-time wave raises (or lowers as the case may be) its resonance to the point of merging with another space-time wave. In doing so, one Universal dimension becomes the continuation of the next, and so on and so forth through the universal structure. Generally, this is known as Ascension.

Those entities that have Ascended in conjunction with this space-time focus to the relatively war-untouched Asia Pacific.

Disarray worsened late in the 2020's, and States began to turn to new loosely formed American regional alliances to promote their own interests and rights, aligning themselves with other States or areas within specific regions for economic and political strength. Though the first introduction of various State currencies backed by independent State and Regional Central Banks emerged as early as the mid 2020s following the value collapse of the America dollar, which was preceded by the recession of the late 2010's and the great US economic collapse that followed, by the 2030's only state or regional currencies backed by real assets were being recognized nationally or internationally. Although many regions and States in this emerging American Union continued to elect Federal "representatives" and discuss national defense, they had little real focus or authority, and by the end of the 2020's references to a central Federal government were perfunctory, even nostalgic.

True power was now firmly seated within a handful of powerful economic and political regions that formally had been collectively known as the United States of America. Where one resided within this collective by the early to mid 2020's was to become very significant, and for the most part this is where one would most likely reside not only through the remainder of the third great world conflict but through the invasion and occupation of central North America still to come.

This factor had far reaching consequences and was the cause of much hardship for friends and families separated by the newly emerged boundaries. Indeed, it would be an understatement to say that life was growing more and more of a challenge for those people still residing in States and regions where natural disasters and lawlessness increased seasonally or where unified economies, assistance, subsidies and legal protections were no longer to be found. It quickly became evident that many former US States would be hit hard by the federal unraveling. This was particularly true in areas dominated by individuals still fighting to preserve their fundamentalist perspective and Service-to-Self orientation, most likely places populated by those very Souls that would choose further future incarnations in a Third Dimensional-based reality.

As some former American States, now fractured and disorganized, bonded together into stronger regional powers, the success of certain regions, such as the region that constituted the New England States or the region of the Pacific Coast, predominated and became the economic winners in the fall out that ensued. By the dawn of the 2030's, most of these regions had militarized and established regional armies for their own protection primarily to protect them from newly formed and ungoverned militias acting almost as outlaw "raiders" emanating from poverty-stricken North American territories. The poverty, disillusion and lawlessness rampant in these depressed regions, former States now non-aligned, was made more poignant by the prosperous regions' refusal to allow immigration or organize disaster aid of any kind. Naturally, this caused mounting resentment that would serve as the seeds for the coming second North American Civil War, not to mention the foreign invasions that civil disturbance would ultimately trigger. These so-called peace keeping invasions would serve once and for all to end the American culture that existed prior to that time.

The second American civil war served as the final coup de grâce for cohesion and unity on the North American continent, and its impact was second only to the devastating natural disasters taking place and the final fall of the US Federal government. As the first Civil War had done previously, the new civil war pitted brother against brother and family against family. In doing so it brought about the destruction and elimination en masse of certain ethnicities, races and other populations living in certain regions on the North American continent.

Although the nations of Canada and Mexico, still relatively intact as nation states, attempted to refrain from any connection or involvement, it was incursions by the outlaw, poverty stricken independent former-US States at this time that would ultimately engulf the entire North American continent in conflict. While Europe and the Middle East were still recovering from the nuclear holocaust and devastations they had experienced, mostly with the aid of Russia and China, much of the world was at this point disinterested in the former United States, leaving it to respond to its own devices and karma. However, the incursions into Mexico and Canada by rogue former US state militias changed attitudes and caused both Asian and Russian populations to demand assistance for the people of Canada, Mexico and Latin America. Russian and Chinese interests in Latin and South America had augmented continually since the beginning of the 2020's, and thus political forces in these nations saw the incursions by former American citizens in those regions as terroristic attacks on their own interests.

Ironically, the offending former US citizens and regions that banded together into militias and were now raiding Canadian and Mexican territories out of economic necessity, the very same groups that not long before had been quick to label any group fighting a cause alien to its own interests as "terrorists," were now labeled as international terrorist organizations themselves. In addition, both the Chinese and Russians, who only reluctantly aligned to come to the world's aid during the great conflict, were still dealing with the sting of that conflict and many held the former US populace and government representatives responsible for originally instigating the world war via secret and clandestine government actions in the first place. Now, China and Russia assumed the role of world police focused on policing rogue regions of the former US, a position once stubbornly adhered to by the United States worldwide. The balancing of this particular energetic karmic debt was obvious to most, and the irony of that situation was not lost on historians of the time.

It was not until the second Civil War in America was underway however, that Asian and Russian political structures, through incarnations of the System Lords, began to consider and finally act upon a goal to successfully colonize parts of former America. Russia had already been provided with virtual free access to large parts of the devastated European continent, as well as large areas of Turkey, the Middle East and North Africa. For its part, particularly in light of the disastrous Earth changes that had occurred in Japan, Taiwan, Korea and the Philippines, which diminished their regional and world influence almost completely, China had freely capitalized and economically benefited from its dominance in Pacific Asia, as well as South East Asia, Australia, Africa, Mexico and, particularly, Latin and South America.

In terms of functioning regions in the former US, for the most part the country mainland had spilt into the New England regional states, the Western Coastal region, the Texas union, and the Chicago-led upper mid-western territories. States or areas found outside of these newly formed regional territories were considered lost (due to the overwhelming natural or manmade disasters that had befallen them, particularly in the western, mid-western and southern portions of the country) or ungovernable. For the most part it was these areas that were mainly responsible for the activity called the second American Civil War and they would also be the areas where the conflict and challenges raged most intensely. While the New England and West Coast regions were economically, politically and militarily savvy enough via foreign alliances and associations to fend off regional or foreign invasion and remain independent, it soon became clear by the mid 2030's into the 2040's that other areas would not be as lucky. Indeed, many US territories were ripe for the taking, as both the Chicago and Texas unions would soon discover.

By the year 2075 any resemblance that may have existed up until then to the United States of the late 20th Century was virtually non-existent. However, before we continue our discussion of the fate of former US regions, let us first take a look at the emergence of the Eurasian Enlightenment, a time of historical importance that emerged on the Third Dimensional timeline in the mid to late 21st Century.

Fifth Dimensional Technologies & Lifestyles

Technology on Fifth Dimensional Terra is far from lacking. However, it is not technology in a sense that you, in your current time and space, would understand or perhaps even appreciate. As an example, there is little to no need for artificial repositories of information such as the Internet and the only communication devices used are those that augment and expand innate natural telepathic abilities. In a world where telepathy is the single most important skill or sense one has, and where students are taught how to tune into energetic banks of mass consciousness and universal information, a far different notion of knowledge and wisdom is possible. On Terra, intrinsic wisdom derived from superior telepathic ability is by far the premier attribute of one's intelligence. In other words, wisdom, as the preeminent component of one's intuitive ability, begets greater intuition and foresight, which are considered the most valuable achievements a student can obtain.

In many ways, the technologies currently being discovered and used on Third Dimensional Earth serve as artificial tools fostering familiarity with technique as well as a precursor to what will be genetically inherent and strived for during incarnations on Fifth Dimensional Terra. Many reading this might assume from that technology on Fifth Dimensional Terra is more or less the same as what will ultimately exist on future Third Dimensional Earth. This is not the case, and Third Dimensional Human attributes will not suddenly be on par with inherent Fifth Dimensional genetic abilities or time-space physics. However, there is a certain significance found in the fact that those Ascended Human Angelics who have graduated to Fifth Dimensional reality will at the least have familiarity with many of the principals that are inherent in the nature of Fifth Density life as a result of the currently reemerging technologies being employed on Third Dimensional Earth.

That however, is where similarities end. As we have said, Fifth Dimensional Terra has been in existence simultaneously with Third Dimensional Earth for eons of time, and the current Terran civilization is better recognized and known throughout the Galaxy than the current Third Dimensional Earth civilization, which in the scheme of things has a very short and inconsequential existence.

Of course, we do not wish to discount the ancient technologically advanced civilizations of Earth that existed for hundreds of thousands of years before the modern era, such as those known as Atlantis, or the civilization of Lemuria on the continent of Mu, as examples. We are discussing here Earth's modern era, which most consider to have begun approximately 10,000 years ago, if not later.

Advanced technology does exist on Terra, particularly as it regards sacred geometry, dimensional physics and universal physical structure, all of which far surpass anything today's Third Dimensional Earth scholars even dream of discovering. It is the Terrans that will enable Human Angelics to enter into and cooperate with a Galactic family in ways that currently are only hinted at in limited manner in your current science fiction and metaphysical understanding.

Terrans have long understood the ways in which their world is part of a greater galaxy and Universe. They further understand that the galaxies and solar systems are all traveling through space and time in a dimensional fold, each with significant populations and Beings existing not only at different ends of the Universe but also intertwined and dimensionally overlapped. Terrans are vaguely aware of Third Dimensional Earth and its civilizations in much the same way you are vaguely aware that there are other cultures and people on different sides of the planet from you that you are not familiar with and with whom you have little to no concern. For instance, you might assume there is a small band of nomads somewhere in Mongolia, but you probably can not picture their location, their faces, their numbers, their flocks or their tents, and probably you have no real need to know more than the fact that they are out there somewhere (we are not speaking here of the scholars in certain fields who make such peoples or things the focus of their pursuit, but everyday people in your world).

The truth be told, Terrans find the limited and primitive vibrational sensations associated with lower dimensions to be dull (in the sense of muted) and uninteresting, and thanks to natural dimensional divides are not much interested in exploring these further. Think of this in the same way you might think of the life of the ant population or of a forest in some distant region not related to you. Although you might take an interest from afar and despite the fact that there are some who would seek to know more about these creatures, you probably have little or no desire to become a tree or an ant in a particular forest that is unknown to you in order to do so. More importantly it certainly is not possible for you to live among them -- as one of them -- to experience their lives.

Technologically and culturally, Terrans do not have a need for many of the things you think of as fundamental to existence in your world that you strive to achieve. A primary part of the social makeup of Third Dimensional Earth incarnations is each individual's need to meet basic requirements for survival. Originally, Source and incarnated Souls intended the survival mechanism to serve as a biological protective device as well as a means of creating additional opportunities for entity growth. This would be a natural byproduct of the need to work in relationship with others to survive, thereby creating familial, communal and other structures that would ensure interaction with each other and provide situations and scenarios for energetic exchange (karma), Soul growth and development.

However, in your modern societies on Earth over the past 10,000 years, this biological mechanism was hijacked and placed on steroids, morphing into the solitary and difficult struggle to survive that you currently see in effect today. Such social systems become heavily skewed towards self-preservation, and the constant need to ensure that fundamental basics are met means that all other pursuits, spiritual or otherwise, must take a back seat. We would suggest that such systems were not naturally evolved but invented for this precise reason as a population and crowd control mechanism, and again would hint towards those leaders of the systems that have affiliations or are directly incarnated from alien Soul populations. Any group overly concerned with day-to-day survival, triggering a biological survival mechanism placed on highest alert, has little time or ability to pursue spiritual or other developmental exercises that are not survival oriented, socially functional or procedurally (dogma) based.

The hijacked biological system found on Third Dimensional Earth is not only unknown on Fifth Dimensional Terra, it would be ineffective and such conditioning would be frowned upon. We would go as far as to say that certain circles on Terra would laugh at or find absurd any structure, social or otherwise, that allowed want or disparity between individuals or segments of the population. Terrans do not believe in or perceive distinctions such as class, race, economic status or any social distinction other than the difference in levels of one's consciousness, ability to master emotions and thought processes and intuitive abilities. These considerations are thought to bring wisdom, peace and satisfaction, and they not only form the basis of successfully achieving personal and societal goals, they are the foundation of Terran thought and social structure.
